Earl Butz
Butz's quote "Go Big or Get Out" has been reported widely in many news articles, but the other quote I mention in the author's note, "Adapt or Die," was taken from his November 13, 1977 debate with Wendell Berry at Manchester College in Indiana. In that debate, he listed reasons why "American agriculture is not in crisis." Later in his remarks, he said: "I've often thought that if I live long enough, that I'm going to adopt Butz's Law of Economics—it's a very simple one: Adapt or Die. It's a harsh one. But those who cling to the moldering past are the ones who die. They truly are the ones to which the word crisis would apply."
